The Honorable Jim Demartini
Stanislaus County Board of Supervisors
1010 10th St. Ste. 6500
Modesto, CA 95354

Dear Chairperson Demartini:

In the midst of the down economy, many Californians and others across the country have seen their financial situations change for the worse, often forcing very difficult sacrifices to afford medications prescribed by their physicians.

To improve access to medications for Americans in need, Lilly USA is adjusting the income eligibility for its most widely used patient assistance programs to allow enrollment of eligible patients with incomes at or less than 300 percent of the U.S. Federal Poverty Level, effective Aug. 1, 2009. This is an income eligibility increase from the previous 200 percent Federal Poverty Level. With this change, the income eligibility limit for all Lilly owned or supported patient assistance programs is set at, or above, 300 percent of the current Federal Poverty Level. As an example, the new yearly eligible income limit for a family of two corresponds to approximately $44,000.

The income eligibility adjustment is a long-term change for the programs, which over the past three years have assisted more than 580,000 patients in the United States and distributed medications valued at over $784 million. Globally, over the past three years, Lilly has donated $883 million in products to patients and agencies throughout the world.

Your constituents who believe they qualify for any of Lilly's patient assistance programs, or whose financial situation has changed from their last tax filing or application to Lilly's programs, may visit www.lilly.com/responsibility/programs to find out more program information.

Sincerely,

Dan Howle
Manager of Public Affairs

LILLY BROADENS INCOME ELIGIBILITY FOR PATIENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Patients at 300 percent of the U.S. Federal Poverty Level, or even higher for some programs, now qualify

INDIANAPOLIS – In the midst of the down economy, many Americans have seen their financial situations change – for the worse – forcing them to make difficult sacrifices to afford medications or detrimental decisions to stop taking medicines.

On Aug. 1, 2009, Lilly USA adjusted the income eligibility for its most widely used patient assistance programs to allow enrollment of eligible patients with incomes at or less than 300 percent of the U.S. Federal Poverty Level. This is an income eligibility increase from the previous 200 percent Federal Poverty Level. With this change, the income eligibility limit for all Lilly owned or supported patient assistance programs is set at, or above, 300 percent of the current Federal Poverty Level. As an example, the new yearly eligible income limit for a family of two corresponds to approximately $44,000.

“By making these changes, we are addressing a real concern for patients we have heard from in recent months. Many have lost their jobs and insurance coverage and need our help to stay on their medications,” said John C. Lechleiter, Ph.D., Eli Lilly and Company chairman, president and chief executive officer. “Patients are our first priority. By relaxing the income guidelines for Lilly’s patient assistance programs, more patients will qualify for Lilly’s patient assistance programs.”

The income eligibility adjustment is a long-term change for the programs, which over the past three years have assisted more than 580,000 patients in the United States and distributed medications valued at over $784 million.

Globally, over the past three years, Lilly has donated $883 million in products to patients and agencies throughout the world.

Patients who believe they qualify for any of Lilly’s patient assistance programs, or whose financial situation has changed from their last tax filing or application to Lilly’s programs, may contact the applicable patient assistance program or visit www.lilly.com/responsibility/programs to find out more program information.
