Capital Improvement Plan Projects Eligible for Use of Public Facilities Fees

The County and all nine cities in the County collect Public Facility Fees in order to mitigate the impact from new development. Revenue from public facility fee collection is allocated to those Capital Projects that are needed to accommodate population and employment growth. The requirements for new facilities, equipment, vehicles, and roads are based on population and employment growth projected within Stanislaus County. Public Facility Fees cannot be more than the cost of the public facility needed to mitigate growth impacts and can only be used for intended purposes. The determination of the quantity of the above listed items to serve the forecasted population growth requires the adoption of standards. These standards establish the level of service for existing and future County infrastructure. Standards are stated in terms of space, services and/or use per capita. A per unit of cost is also used to calculate a correct public facility fee amount. New development cannot be held responsible for a higher standard than exists for the current population.

Use of PFF funding for any project is subject to the review and recommendation of the County's Public Facilities Fees Review Committee and subsequent approval by the Board of Supervisors. The following specific projects have already been identified as eligible for full or partial funding by use of Stanislaus County Public Facilities Fees. In addition, fees are collected for specific types of services identified in the Public Facilities Fees study. Please refer to the Stanislaus County Public Facilities Impact Fee Study.
