MULTI-AGENCY PAROLE/PROBATION SWEEPS NETS 12 ARRESTS

Riverbank, CA – Law enforcement officers from six different agencies conducted a parole/probation sweep operation in Northeast Stanislaus County that resulted in twelve arrests. During the operation, officers from Riverbank, Waterford, Stanislaus Sheriff's Department, Oakdale, Stanislaus County Probation, California State Parole, DMV Investigators and Federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement Agents completed sixty-three searches and contacted seventy-nine homes.

The primary focus areas of the operation were the Cities of Riverbank, Waterford and Oakdale. This included the unincorporated county areas surrounding these cities.

The operation's goal was to contact as many probationers/parolees as possible to ensure they were complying with the terms of their respective status. Typically, when an inmate is granted probation or parole they are given guidelines to follow while released. Probation Officers and Parole Agents are charged with monitoring these offenders and keeping them within their set guidelines.

"Our job is and always will be to protect the public," said Stanislaus County Sheriff Adam Christianson. "Even in these times of unprecedented declines in revenue, we can pool our resources together with other agencies to put together large scale operations such as this one."

In total, three parolees were violated for narcotics and drug possession. Eight probationers were also violated for offenses ranging from failing to allow a search, to possession of methamphetamine. Two firearms were also located in possession by a convicted felon. The felon, Michael Woody, 33, Waterford, was arrested for violating his parole as well as possessing the firearms and methamphetamine.

Riverbank Detective Mark Copeland and Deputy Probation Officer Nil Saing spearheaded the operation out of their Riverbank office. "Its obvious that this operation could not have been conducted by any one agency," said
